

Getting Started With Your Kidney Kampaign

In early 2012, I was told that I needed another kidney transplant. One year after my first transplant in 2007 I contracted the BK Virus, a rare condition that attacks the transplanted kidney. Over the next 4 years the BK Virus attacked my kidney and in early 2012 I was told that I needed another kidney transplant.

I immediately developed my own Kidney Kampaign that resulted in a mutual acquaintance introducing me to my eventual donor.

I've made available to you the documents I used for this kampaign. To see the email I sent out to friends and family members click HERE. To read the attachment that I used in that email to educate those who were interested in learning more about my health issues and need for another kidney transplant, click HERE.

When family members or friends asked what they could do to help, my response was, "other than being tested to donate, you could help spread the word about my situation." I told them that I developed a flyer that could be posted on any bulletin board, libraries, Starbucks, etc., where you work, places of worship, anywhere there's a public bulletin board. I would provide them with the flyer. To see a copy of the instructions for placing the flyer click HERE. To see the flyer that I developed, click HERE. To see the cards that I printed that could be handed out and taped to the flyer, click HERE. For more information on how to print the cards go to the home page of the LKDN website. www.LKDN.org
